Tips for Frontline Workers During the Pandemic

Tips for Successful Family Partnerships

Inclusion and Training

- ◆ Collaborate with and include families at all levels of health care, from care of the individual child to professional education, policy making, program development, research, a medical home design, and workflows.
- ◆ The first step to the inclusion of families is to stop excluding them.

Empathy

- ◆ Acknowledge the stress and trauma experienced by families and caregivers and consider how these challenges contribute to the child's wellbeing and the family's capacity. Affirm the difficulty of past experiences and be empathetic about how hard it is to navigate the healthcare system.
- ◆ Demonstrate compassion when families describe challenges attributed to structural racism.

Tips for Successful Family Partnerships

Allyship vs. Partnership

- ◇ Allyship is when a person from a non-marginalized group, uses their privilege to advocate for a marginalized group. Allyship is an extension of partnership.
- ◇ Partnerships have been promoted as best practice and families feel part of the team providing care, but do they feel they have an ally that will speak up for them? Use your privilege to support families.

Community Resources and Family and Peer Support Networks

- ◇ Learn and understand communities and cultures and how they impact the way families perceive care and connect with their community.
- ◇ Collaborate with families to identify gaps in community supports and work to create new pathways to resources that are missing.
- ◇ Build relationships with community cultural brokers, who can assist you in understanding community norms and link your team with other families and organizations that can help promote your message or coordinate outreach.

Wrap-up and Looking to the Future:

Where does your hope lie?

"You may not control
all the events that happen to you, but you can decide not to be reduced by them."
